Methodology

Data reliability, sport by sport

Each sport receives a reliability grade, shown on its card (By sport page), in the federation list and on its profile. It does not judge the sport: it tells how far its 1,000 points rest on complete data.

High reliability full method, at least two sources (world ranking or several competitions), deep results (8 nations or more, medal or placing table, or a ranking of 20 places or more) and at least 8 ranked nations.

Medium reliability accurate but less complete data: a single competition, podiums only, or the light method.

Limited reliability 3 ranked nations or fewer, or a single podium without a ranking: a handful of results share the 1,000 points.

This edition: 43 federations graded A (63.6 % of the weight) · 29 federations graded B (17.2 % of the weight) · 8 federations graded C (3.4 % of the weight).

1. Rating each sport

We start from the international federations, the official governing bodies of each sport, which group its disciplines. Each one receives a score out of 10, based on four sourced criteria.

Criterion	Weight	Measure	Scale
Participation	35 %	Number of practitioners	$10 \times (\text{practitioners} / 1\ \text{billion})^{0.5}$
Audience	25 %	Number of fans	$10 \times (\text{fans} / 5\ \text{billion})^{0.5}$
Reach	25 %	Member national federations	linear, 210 members = 10
Olympic status	15 %	Olympic status	Summer Games 10 · LA 2028 and Winter Games 8 · ARISF 5 · AIMS 3 · other 1

relative weight = score^1.45 / Σ score^1.45 → the top 3 sports weigh ~10 % of the total, the top 10 26 %

The 1.45 exponent makes the scale more discriminating than a simple proportion: basketball, football and volleyball weigh clearly more than niche sports, without crushing them.

2. Sharing 1,000 points per federation

Each federation distributes exactly 1,000 points among nations, according to their sporting results.

Split

- 50 % men, 50 % women.
- Team sports: 80 % main event, 20 % secondary disciplines (3×3, futsal, beach volleyball, rugby sevens…).

- Individual sports: singles 60 %, doubles 20 %, teams 20 %; mixed events 10 % of the federation.
- In each discipline: 50 % official world ranking, 50 % major competitions.

Competitions

- Olympics 35 %, World Championships 35 %, continental championships 30 %.
- Tennis and golf: the majors replace the World Championships.
- Placing scale: 25 / 18 / 14 / 11 / 8 / 8 / 8 / 8 %, then 4 % for each place from 9th to 16th; ties = average of the places.
- Individual tournaments counted down to the round of 16 or 16th place (Grand Slams, golf majors, World Snooker Championship, Tour de France, cycling and table tennis World Championships, Olympic golf).
- Medal table for sports with many events: gold 25, silver 18, bronze 14. Athletics: World Athletics' official placing table (8 points for 1st, 7 for 2nd… 1 for 8th in each event), which also measures depth.
- Latest edition of each competition; weights renormalised if one is missing.
- Cap (since v1.1): a single place or rank cannot earn more than 150 points out of 1,000; the excess is redistributed to the sport's other results, pro rata, and whatever cannot be redistributed goes to no one. Medal and placing tables, which add up many events, are not capped.

points for rank r in the world ranking $\propto (N + 1 - r)^2$ (N = depth used: top 50 in tennis, golf and snooker, top 20 elsewhere) cap per nation = Olympic quota (tennis 4, golf 4, table tennis 2, badminton 2; F1 and MotoGP 2)

3. Two levels of method

Full method for the 62 most important federations (80.1 % of the total weight): world ranking and competitions, as above. Light method for the 61 smaller federations: latest World Championships (or 2025 World Games) and Olympics where relevant, top 4 places for men and women, 100 % competitions.

A federation without reliable results by nation is not attributed: its 1,000 points go to no one, which favours no country. This edition has 43 of them, representing 15.7 % of the weight.

4. A nation's score

weighted score = Σ (nation's points in the federation × federation's relative weight × 100)

Example: United States scores 180.4 points out of 1,000 in Athletics (World Athletics, coefficient 2.52). That adds 180.4 × 2.52 = 455 points to its total score of 6,044.

5. Three rankings and a summary

The sport ranking adds up the weighted points. Economic efficiency compares that score with the one expected given GDP per capita at purchasing power parity. Demographic efficiency compares it with the one expected given the population, using the normal distribution (expected top talent = $\Phi^{-1}(1$

− 1/population)). Overall performance sums up all three: each rank is converted into a score out of 100, then weighted 50 % sport, 25 % economic and 25 % demographic.

6. Additional indicators

- Sub-rankings: by continent (each nation's continental Olympic association) and among nations with fewer than 10 million inhabitants, by overall performance; by family of sports (summer, winter, Olympic), by the score earned in those sports only.
- Women-men balance: index = 100 − 2 × |women's share of the score − 50| (100 = parity), and the gap between the ranks in the women's and men's rankings; calculated for the top 60 nations of the sport ranking.
- Los Angeles 2028: a calculation exercise, not a prediction. The medals of the official programme are shared, sport by sport, in proportion to current HSR points, then rounded to whole numbers by the largest remainder method (the totals add up exactly).
- Identifiers: ISO code and Wikidata identifier of each nation (Natural Earth), in the open data and the JSON API.

Conventions

- England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are grouped under the United Kingdom.
- Russia and Belarus are kept; neutral athletes are assigned to their country.
- Para sports are excluded for now.

Limits of this edition

- Continental championships included only for the top 10 sports.
- Wushu, Muay Thai, kickboxing, boules and finswimming are still calculated from the 2025 World Games, for lack of a complete, sourced table of their World Championships.
- Individual rankings to the top 50 (tennis, men's and women's golf, snooker); top 20 in table tennis and badminton, for lack of a deeper reliable source. No individual ranking yet for squash and darts.
- Individual tournaments: 2026 Badminton World Championships and the women's road race at the cycling World Championships limited to the top 4; Olympic tennis to the quarter-finals.
- F1 and MotoGP counted on the 2025 season; rugby league on the 2021 World Cup.
- Every result used is linked to a source that can be checked (verified on 11 November 2026). Federations without reliable results by nation remain unattributed.

The ranking is recalculated every month: world rankings replaced by their latest release, new editions of competitions added, unattributed federations included as soon as reliable results are found.
